Timothy Moloi is our National Treasure. One of the greatest South African singers and recording artist who studied at Ohio Wesleyan University in the United States. His album "Love that music" is still a classic, it is love personified with faves like "Friday morning" & "Dont tell me it's over". Additionally I can tell you for free , seeing Timothy Moloi perform live, is a life-altering experience.

The Khanatural Team was invited to experience his show , "LasVegas" , at Montecasino. Conducted by Adam Howard, The 18-piece Johannesburg Big Band took us on a journey through the life and times of Swingin' Las Vegas, featuring home-grown stars Craig Urbani, Corlea, Timothy Moloi and Harry Sideropoulos. A mind blowing cast, whenever the spotlight shone on Timothy in his glam suit, holding the mic, the crowd went nuts.

Performing on big stages , on shows like the 16th South African Music Awards, Africa Day, and at two Miss South Africa Pageants , we felt the need to get to know him personally & celebrate his greatness. This is a man who belted it all out at the Africa Peace Initiative Awards and at the Closing Ceremony of the 1999 All-Africa Games in Johannesburg, South Africa. Were you there too?

Q&A with Timothy

Ok Lord Tim! Let's talk wellness because we know that a sound mind is important in order to maintain such a talent.

What on earth do you do, to maintain such a velvety rich voice?

- "The most important things to keep the voice in good condition are plenty of liquids and lots of sleep. I eat at home mostly, which I think is much healthier. And I try to keep fast food to a minimum."

Q: Do you believe it's best to exercise as a family or individually ?

- "I do Zumba once a week with my dear friend Carolyn Steyn. Additionally, I try to go to the gym by myself at least two to three times a week. At the gym I do step classes, and weight training. I also love walking, aiming for a 12km walk two or three times a week."

Q: Does the great Timothy cook ? Please share your most recent dish ! Your festive plate .

- "The festive season is all about tradition. But we cooked our turkey on the braai together with gammon and all the trimmings. I then completed it all with a delicious South African trifle. It's always a special time of year to spend with loved ones."

Q: What else do you cook ?

- "I love cooking. I make a great lamb biryani. And I also make a really good moussaka which is a firm favourite in our home. And like many South Africans I love to braai, especially in summer."

Timothy is a home body - We love this ! "I enjoy spending time at home with my partner, Brian listening to music or watching movies."

Q: What do you two love watching together?
"We love watching Formula One racing and tennis."

Q: Speaking of tennis . Do you play ?
- "I recently started to play tennis. I've really been enjoying it!"

Q: Please tell our readers what makes you special and unique and why we are head over heels for you!

- "Well, I taught myself to crochet a few years ago by watching YouTube tutorials. I use this skill to make blankets and scarves for 67 Blankets for Nelson Mandela Day, an incredible initiative that helps keep those less fortunate a bit warmer during the cold winter months."

Q: And how many blankets have you crocheted?
- "have crocheted over 40 blankets so far."

A man with a golden heart and a voice to match. This is why we celebrate Kings like Timothy.

Thank you

AN ICE COLD SOLUTION

I've been exploring cold showers because the heat in South Africa this season is absolutely on steroids. Yes this cools me down beautifully, and also reminded me of the benefits thereof.

Cultures around the world have used cold water therapy for thousands of years. For example, cold water immersion was used for therapeutic and relaxation purposes in ancient Greece and promoted by Roman physician Claudius Galen as a treatment for fever, according to a review published in February 2022 in the European Journal of Applied Physiology. Our friends at Everyday Health helped me put this together.

How Cold Water Therapy Works:

Exposing your body to cold water causes the blood vessels in submerged areas to narrow (known as vasoconstriction), which directs blood to your organs, says Jonathan Leary, CEO and founder of Remedy Place who holds a doctorate in chiropractic medicine. Remedy Place is a wellness facility in New York City, and California that offers ice bath classes.

Plus, water exerts pressure (known as hydrostatic pressure) on the body, which promotes blood flow to major organs like the heart, brain, and lungs, according to research. When more blood moves toward your major organs, it's able to gather more oxygen and nutrients.

As soon as you emerge from the cold water, those same blood vessels expand (known as vasodilation), Dr. Leary says. When that happens, the oxygen- and nutrient-rich blood gets pumped back to your tissues, helping remove waste products, such as lactic acid, and lower inflammation, per research.

"You can't have pain or disease without inflammation," Leary says. As such, methods that lower inflammation, like cold water therapy may be helpful for many health complaints.

Cold water therapy

A couple is relaxing in a hot tub. The man in the foreground is holding a black smartphone. The woman is behind him. There are orange slices and a pine branch floating in the water.

Using cold water therapy on a regular basis may also have long-term benefits for your heart and blood vessels. Around every blood vessel is a muscle, so just like doing a bicep curl strengthens your biceps, cold water therapy strengthens your blood vessels, Leary explains. Over time, this may boost circulation by improving your blood vessels' ability to circulate blood through your body.

Cold water therapy can be done at home, in a natural body of water, or at a fitness club, physical therapy clinic, or specialty wellness studio. However, it's best to do cold water therapy under the guidance of a physical therapist, chiropractor, or other healthcare professional if you're using it to recover from an injury, for sports performance, or to help with chronic pain.

THE HEALTH BENEFITS

1. May Aid Muscle Recovery:

Stepping into an ice bath may help speed up recovery after exercise. In fact, the majority of research on the potential health benefits of cold water therapy involve muscle recovery.

2. May Help Relieve Pain:

Cold water therapy is often used in physical therapy settings to lower inflammation and pain in people with long-lasting (chronic) and short-term (acute) pain, Dr. Gallucci says.

3. May Boost Your Mood:

A cold water plunge may temporarily put you in a better mood.

What are your thoughts? Have you attempted cold water therapy? Please share your journey with us.

A new year resolution recipe

THE RECIPE

BREAK IT DOWN: Create a series of sub-goals to help you reach your main goal.

GET SUPPORT: Tell friends and family about your goals, and find an accountability partner.

BE KIND TO YOURSELF: Expect to revert to old habits, and treat failures as temporary setbacks.

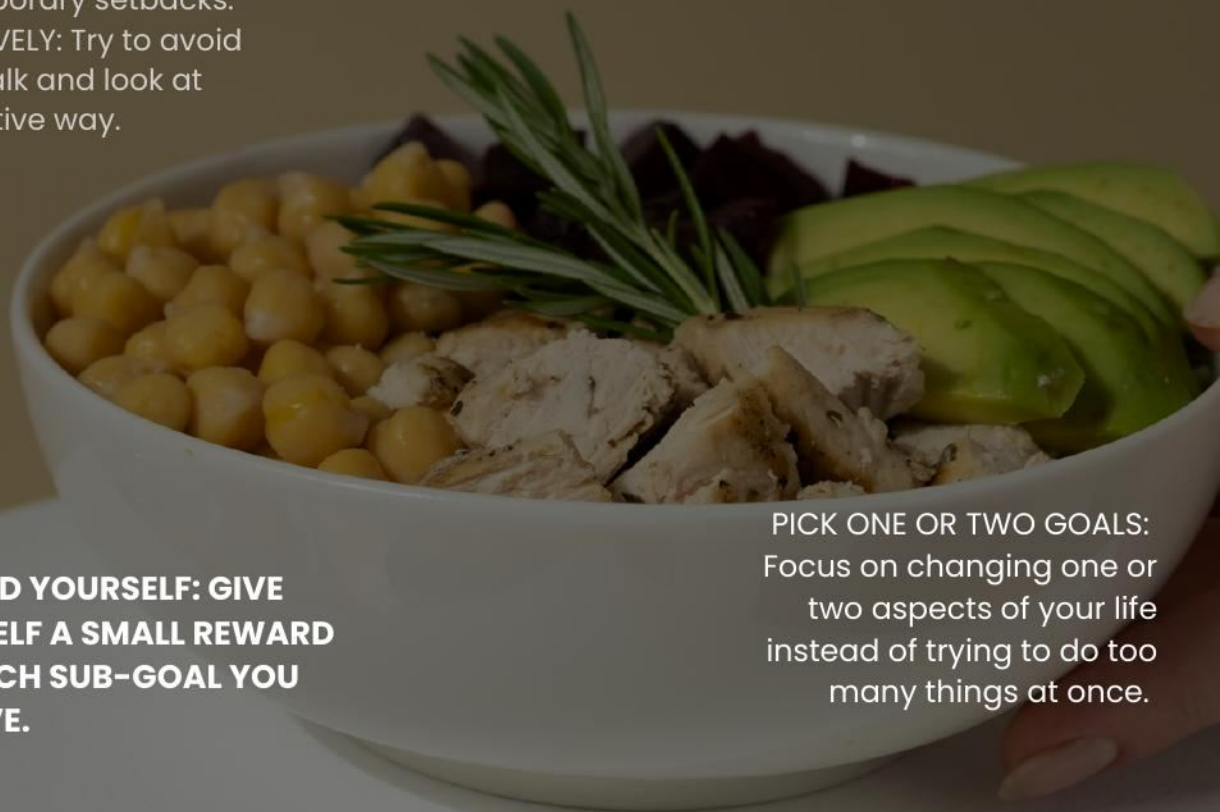

FRAME IT POSITIVELY: Try to avoid negative self-talk and look at things in a positive way.

PLAN AHEAD: Choose your resolution a few days before New Year's Eve, and don't base it on your mindset on that particular day.

SET REALISTIC GOALS: Make sure your goals are specific, achievable, and measurable.

REWARD YOURSELF: GIVE YOURSELF A SMALL REWARD FOR EACH SUB-GOAL YOU ACHIEVE.

PICK ONE OR TWO GOALS: Focus on changing one or two aspects of your life instead of trying to do too many things at once.

THE INTRO

Miss Khoza welcomes us to 2025! We caught up with her briefly on the set of SABC 2's food and lifestyle show, DIJO LE BOPHELO. I can confidently say she's one in a million... and she knows her job to the T! As the host and creative behind the show, I've witnessed her brilliance firsthand. Episode after episode, Tsaki seamlessly mic'd me up, ensuring every piece of equipment blended perfectly with my wardrobe. She worked tirelessly to make sure the sound was flawless, never compromising on quality. This is why she's our ONE TO WATCH!

THE PASSION

Q: Tsaki, in terms of sound, what can't you do?
"One can say I am 'a jack of all trades' but I think I just love understanding environments I find myself in."

Q: Would you say you know it all in your audio field or are you still learning?
"I try to absorb as much as I can. I do that by learning what is accessible to me."

Q: Where did your passion for audio begin?
"My passion for audio began at a young age in church. After studying various aspects of the medium, I pursued a career in television production, where I had the privilege of working with incredible talents such as Ramy Taitus, the late Lebohang Moyana, and the iconic Khabonina Qubeka."

MINDSET

Q: Where else have you worked as an audio specialist?
"I've worked in radio at East coast radio as a Technical producer for amazing presenters, namely: Carol Ofori, Vic Naidoo and Danny Guselli."

Q: Who is Tsaki Khoza?
"I am a simple girl who is growing and learning about herself everyday because I believe that self mastering is mastering everything."

We are definitely stealing that quote!

Thank you Tsaki!

A 2025 SOUND MIND -with Dambisa

It's 2025, and the thing about the beginning of a new year is that it brings a lot of hope for a better life: a better work environment, a better relationship with oneself, and so on. Most of us, if not all, tend to use the start of the year as a fresh opportunity to revisit goals that haven't been achieved or to discover new things about our interests.

Because 2024 was challenging in many aspects for me, I'm looking to 2025 as a vehicle for a new challenge, with the goal of ensuring my mindset is ready for any obstacles that may come my way. The thing about life is that we, as individuals, are often the ones who fail to adapt to its changes the way we should. No one can fully prepare you for any challenge, and while we may long for only the good side of life, the bad will always exist on the other side of the equilibrium.

I haven't given birth to a child, but life has presented me with motherhood – a story I never envisioned for myself. In 2024, I lost my sister, and with that loss came a 14-year-old boy that needs me. This meant I had to adjust quickly and stop thinking about the "I never wanted kids" mindset. In addition, I found the love of my life, who has a 6-year-old daughter. This means I am now a mother of two.

In January, a whole new chapter awaits me and those around me. My 14-year-old nephew will be moving in with my partner and me. Neither of us has lived with children full-time, as his daughter only visits, so we're about to step into full-time parenting. Isn't it a bit scary to think about? The unknown is always daunting, but since June, when my sister passed away, I've been working on myself, trying to figure out what kind of parent I want to be. How do I transition from being the best aunt with little authority to becoming an authoritative parent who makes decisions for the kids?

My partner has been more of a rock than ever during this time. As we awaited the arrival of 2025, he guided me with advice, support, and philosophies that eased my anxiousness and helped me feel more equipped for the journey ahead.

Life happens the way it happens. We have little control over many things, but it should never find you unprepared. Every day, you must pour into yourself, so much so that, even in the heaviest storm, your mind remains sound and calm. When you're in this state, you often find that the 'issue' isn't as big as it seems, because while life does take, it also gives.

A 2025 SOUND MIND

- with Dambisa

To be honest, a sound mind consists of intentionally feeding it with positivity, fitness, and knowledge. There are many ways to nourish your mind. Recently, I've been focusing on strengthening the power of the mind. My partner is teaching me how to meditate, and I'm working consistently on staying positive, from thoughts to actions and words. For example, I no longer want to claim a negative state of mind, like saying, "I'm not okay, but I will be fine" even if just in my thoughts. Instead, I'm working on acknowledging that things aren't where I'd like them to be, but without claiming the situation as my identity. The universe responds to the claims we make, and I plan to unpack more of my thoughts on this in an upcoming chat.

In addition, I've committed to going to the gym. It's not that I've suddenly stopped being lazy, but I want to help myself so that I can be a better partner, parent, sister, friend, and co-worker. I'm also focusing on eating better. Side note: I recently learned that store-bought almond milk is not as healthy as we're led to believe. As if life isn't tough enough, this realization has motivated me to read more about what I consume so I can ensure a sound mind, mental freedom, and overall clarity, first for myself, and then, through the ripple effect, for those around me.

For 2025, I wish us all a sound mind - one that can help us navigate life's offerings, especially the tray full of things we'd rather discard. A mind that always shows gratitude. Happy New Year
